Amin SHOJAEI

Iranian artist

Born in 1986, lives and works in Paris

These works are the result of an ongoing exploration of the biological strata of trees, natural habitats, and oceanic rocks a realm where three layers converge: air, water, and living organisms, such as shellfish, that inhabit this interstitial threshold. This space constitutes a living layer of the “in-between” a state of becoming where life takes shape within cavities.

The Lagoon series emerged from my exploration of the wetlands of southern Iran and has evolved within my painterly practice to become an essential body of work, on which I continue my research to this day.

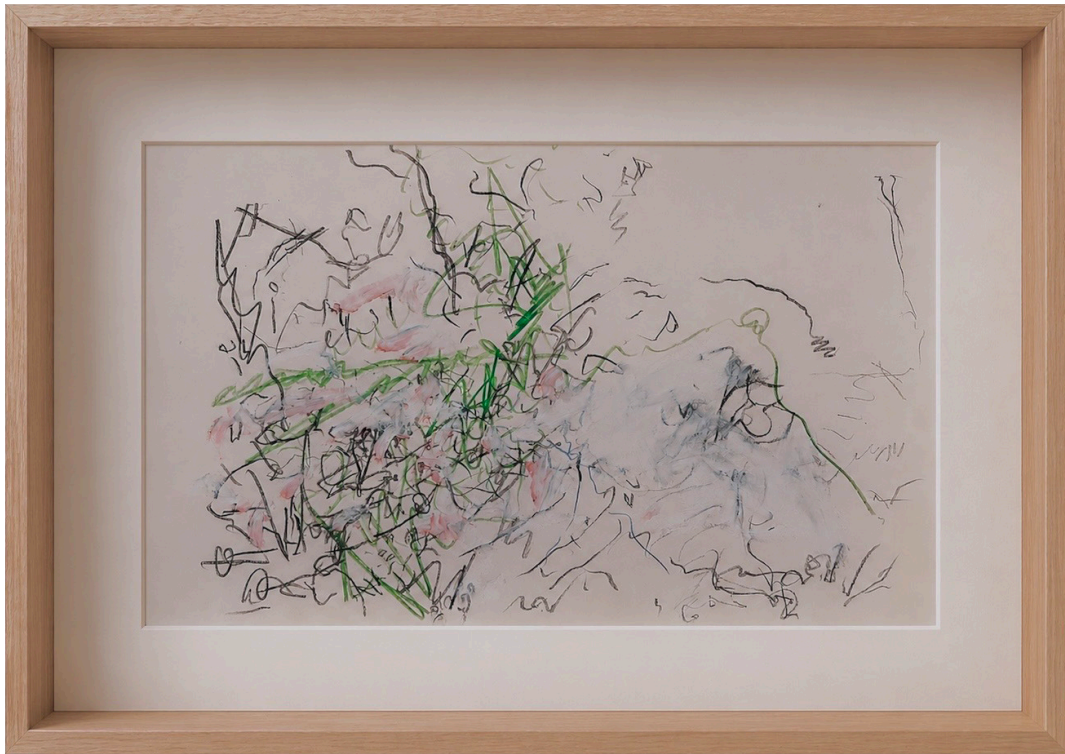

As an Iranian living through a period of transition in a postwar context, I inhabit a collective limbo shaped by what might be called the “aftermath” and by the continuity of the revolution. This state of semi-limbo allows me to explore the affective dimensions of collective emotions as well as their relationship to our shared environment.

Displacements, migrations, and travels leave their mark on me, much like the growth rings of a tree. As Goethe wrote, a tree bears two types of lines: horizontal lines, which are feminine in nature and shaped by external forces, and vertical lines of growth, to which he attributes a masculine quality. In Golshan series (Golshan means paradise in Persian literature) via paintings from Trees, I seek to sense these lines and their poeticness. These marks sometimes fade before reappearing when another line crosses them, much like the lines on the palm of the hand, which change over time.
