

An abstract painting featuring a large, expressive eye with a dark brown iris and a blue and orange eyelid. The eye is set against a textured, reddish-pink background. To the right, there are dark, swirling, brushstrokes that suggest a face or a head. The overall style is gestural and expressive, with visible brushwork and a rich, textured surface.

Born in 1994, lives and works in Paris.

Just as 'seeing' is not a passive act but an active gesture of choice, the "game" of establishing relationships between objects reveals unconsciously hidden desires and needs.

The flow of the gaze expressed by the objects, the freedom of the imagination, and the desire expressed by this freedom, transcend the material nature of the objects and blend the living and the non-living.

By possessing life, the objects become exaggerated and playful, and through their interaction with figures, they cross the boundaries between life and death, desire and reality, the beautiful and the grotesque.
