Manon AJORQUE

French Artist

Born in 1998, lives and works in Paris.

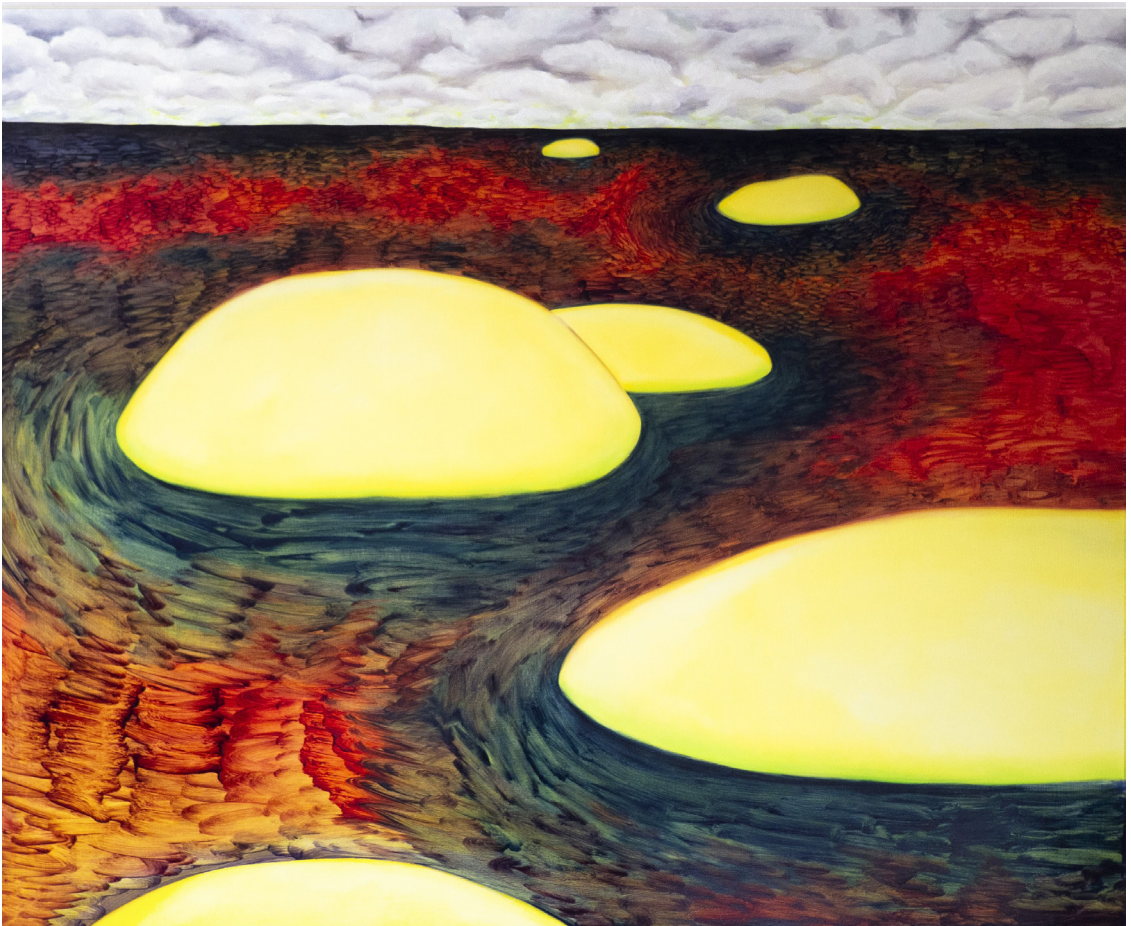

Through her works, Manon Ajourque reveals the vital forces that animate the world. She immerses herself in these currents and attunes her movements to their rhythm quivering like a torrent, floating like clouds, anchored like rock. She gives form to matter by making air, water, earth, and fire vibrate. The forms painted on canvas, cut from wood, or sculpted from plaster approach the essential, the elemental contours of nature. Their universality thus brings each landscape closer to an organic vision or a cosmic fragment, and these metamorphoses can unfold according to each viewer's perception.

It is also through color that the artist brings these natural currents to life, revealing a dimension that is both energetic and emotional. Certain colors, charged with energy, radiate and seem poised to shift into another state: the flash before it fades away. The artist's works bear witness to this very impermanence to the cycle of elements that transform and traverse spaces. In her paintings, a horizon line delineates this subtle boundary where metamorphosis occurs from the depths to the heights, from the tangible to the ethereal, from the visible to the invisible. Manon Ajourque awakens the world's pulsations and the movements of life that connect these spaces and allow them to coexist. A sensitive flow takes hold, carried by these vital currents, which unites us as well with this environment. Between air and earth, life makes its way, rises, or flows as sea, river, cloud, rain, or tear an odyssey.
